

CONCORD COLLEGE
Athens, West Virginia
June 3, 1968

CITATION

THEODORE DAVIDGE LOCKWOOD
Doctor of Humane Letters

THEODORE DAVIDGE LOCKWOOD, you are no stranger to this platform, and we warmly welcome your return to the place where you were baptized into the ranks of academic administrators. Scholar, teacher, historian, you brought to Concord a sense of what a college should be, and helped make it so; but you also brought to this campus "Tucker," who caused a faculty neighbor to exclaim, "No true college dean would ever have such a dumb dog!" Also, while we are noting your failures, it is obvious that the expert skier finally met his match on some mountain slope! But enough of this, for a former instructor in Great Issues should not bore another for long with little ones. Perhaps it is not just coincidence that on the occasion of your first visit to this College, on Veterans Day in 1959, when you spoke to us on "Peace and the Purpose of A College," you expressed thoughts similar to those expressed by a graduate and a president today: You said then, "In a world marked by its factual complexity, the college must put into practice that unity of knowledge which can relate skills to a sense of responsibility." Soon to be the President of Trinity College, where you graduated summa cum laude and won your Phi Beta Kappa Key, your friends and colleagues at Concord wish you much success and happiness, and we welcome this occasion to have a respected former dean inscribed on our rolls forever by conferring upon you Concord College's degree of Doctor of Humane Letters.

In testimony of this degree I hand you this diploma and cause you to be invested with this hood.

Given under the Seal of Concord College and conferred from the academic halls in Athens, West Virginia, on this third day of June in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and sixty-eight, and of the College the ninety-seventh.

Joseph Franklin Marsh, Jr.
President