

PSYCHOLOGY

The Psychology Program strives to prepare students for professional training in the field of psychology by providing experience with the essential methods and findings of experimental, clinical, and theoretical psychology. The program offers courses geared to help students gain experience with psychology as a science, addressing issues of human behavior, thought, emotions, and mental illness from a number of theoretical perspectives.

Psychology students at Concord University have the opportunity to tailor their experience through a wide variety of elective courses and research opportunities

POTENTIAL CAREERS:

Business & Service Industry

Forensic & Legal Services

Human Resources/Personnel

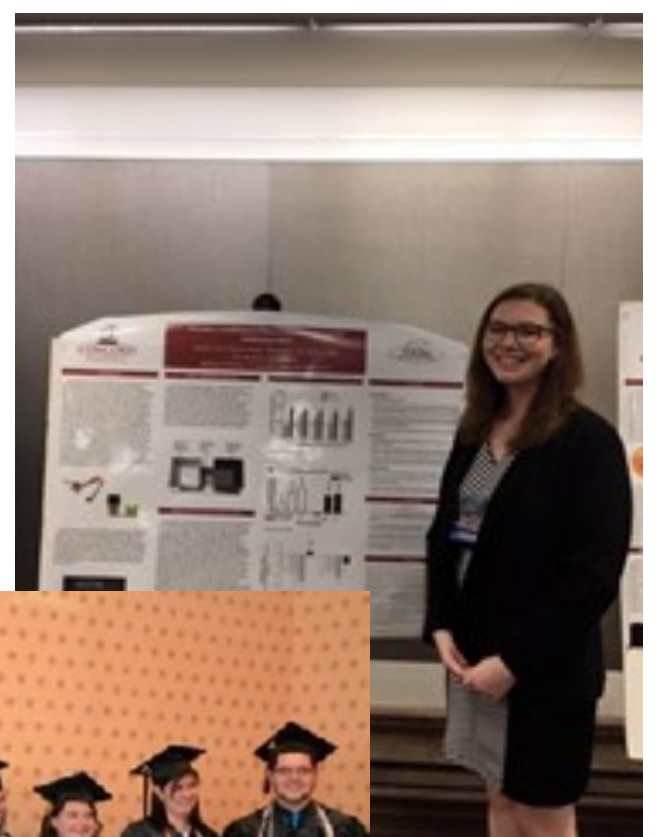

Law Enforcement

Mental Health

Public Affairs

Research

This program will also prepare you for graduate school in Psychology and related fields!

Have Questions? Want to learn more? Contact:

Dr. Rodney Klein | kleinr@concord.edu | 304-384-5222