

The English program at CU provides students with a broad scope of knowledge in literature survey classes and a deep dive into particular subjects in seminars. The program also offers courses in various genres of writing, and prepares students for careers in a variety of fields. Regardless of career path chosen, through reading works of literature students will be able to better understand how literature both reflects and comments on society and humanity, enabling them to better understand their world. The reading and writing required in this major will also prepare students to be close and critical readers of their world, as well as effective communicators. In consultation with their advisor, students can choose classes which focus on writing, literature, and/or theory/linguistics, depending on their interests and future plans.

POTENTIAL CAREERS:

Broadcasting

Publishing

Editing

Teaching

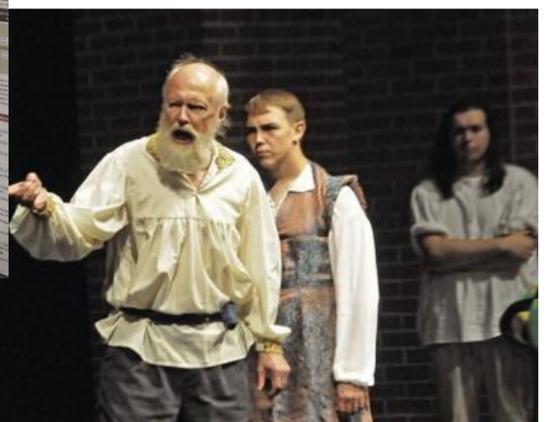

Journalism

Technical Writing

Marketing

Writing

This program will also prepare you for graduate school in English, Writing, Law, Library Science, and other related fields!

Have Questions? Want to learn more? Contact:

Dr. Michelle Gompf | mgompf@concord.edu | 304-384-6085